

COMMITTEES ARE ALL NAMED NOW

SPEAKER INGRAM SELECTS THE MEMBERS OF LEGISLATIVE WORKING BODY.

WORK HAS ACTUALLY BEGUN

Rock County Men Remembered On Many Of The Most Important Committees.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Jan. 17.—A list of committees which apparently met with general approval was presented to the assembly this morning by Speaker Charles A. Ingram of Durand. Members who have had legislative experience indicated their satisfaction with the speaker's selections and the impression prevailed that the list had been made up with an eye to the peculiar fitness of each member for the work to which he was assigned. The speaker had secured for in advance comprehensive data regarding each member, in addition to learning their individual preferences, and this list, therefore, represents the results of long and patient investigation.

Twenty-four republicans in the assembly have had previous legislative experience, and each was given the chairmanship of a committee, regardless of factional affiliations. Some surprise was occasioned when it was learned that Assemblyman C. F. Viebahn of Watertown, a democrat who however, is regarded as independent in educational affairs, had been made chairman of the education committee. This is the first time that a minority member has been so recognized in the history of the Wisconsin legislature. Mr. Viebahn is a veteran educator and has been superintendent of schools of Jefferson county.

Another notable feature of the list is the fact that two socialists have been given places on the committee on cities. Heretofore but one socialist has secured a place on this body, but the speaker took into account the fact that nearly all the socialists come from Milwaukee. He also has given them rank ahead of the democrats, as there are more democrats than socialists from the state's metropolis. The democrats move to give to each party the dictation of its membership on committees, while looking upon a political play, was really designed to prevent the social democrats from obtaining more than one membership in the committee on cities and other committees. The social democrats were too shrewd to be caught however, and as a result, rank with the democrats on both the important committees on cities and legislative procedure.

At the last session of the legislature there were thirty-eight committees. Under the reorganization plan which has been forced through by Speaker Ingram, a number of the obsolete committees have been abolished, new committees have been formed, making the total number 42. In the house there are twenty-four old republican members, eight democrats of previous experience and three socialists, leaving sixty-five new members who must be schooled anew in the process of lawmaking.

Assemblyman J. E. McConnell, who heads the committee on judiciary, is a lawyer of wide experience, practicing in La Crosse. He was a candidate for speaker, but retired in favor of Mr. Ingram. The chairman of the new committee on constitutional amendment, which will consider among other things the proposed initiative and referendum measures, is L. E. Gettle of Edgerton, William A. Kay of Pierce, chairman of the committee on cities and economic betterment. L. E. Haight and Merrill Hill, both members of the 1909 session, are chairman of the committee on taxation and excise and fees respectively. The last named committee will consider the bill to be presented by the independent liquor dealers in this state to prevent the "brewery trust" from operating saloons. Erich G. Hearn, a Milwaukee republican, is chairman of the committee on cities, and J. C. Kamper of Racine, another republican, heads the committee on conservation. C. A. Crowell, a banker of Portage, is chairman of the committee on banks.

WOMEN OF LONDON AS SHOP-LIFTERS

Even Society Women Caught Stealing In American Department Store in London.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]

London, Jan. 17.—"I don't know why I did it," wailed a society woman in a London police court.

"I know why," the magistrate answered. "You did it because you want something for nothing."

The woman had pleaded guilty to shoplifting at "Selfridges," the only American department store in London. The case was one of three tried on the same day—all "Selfridges" cases. In each case, the prisoner was a woman of means, education, and social position, who never has got into trouble with the law before, and who felt the disgrace keenly.

The "Selfridges experiment" as it has been called, has had one result which no one foresaw. It has offered to the women of the upper classes an irresistible temptation to steal. Professional shoplifters give "Selfridges" a wide berth.

The big establishment in Oxford at which Harry Gordon Selfridge formerly of Marshall Field's of Chicago, is proprietor, differs from English "shops" in many respects, but chiefly in that the buying public is invited to go there in its leisure hours and enjoy itself.

That is the American idea of entering for business, and Selfridge made a strong play for the patronage of the women by urging them to make themselves at home in the rear room, the lounge, the library, and the writing room, to scribble notes on "Selfridges" stationery, to call up their friends on "phone," to sit in deep, luxurious chairs and listen to orchestral music, to stroll aimlessly through the department. No one is pressed to buy.

The English merchant expects no one to leave his shop without buying something. His clerks do not attempt to hide their annoyance when purchases are not made. The woman who would dare to announce that she had come "just to look around" would receive scant courtesy.

"Selfridges" caught on with the feminine half of the London public who enjoyed the "Yankee notion." Among the earlier crowds were a few professional shoplifters who were soon nabbed. A few successful prosecutions drove the professionals away.

Not a day passes that well-dressed women are not quietly escorted to the "office" and relieved of articles they have stolen, lectured and warned, and sent away, weeping and ashamed.

Scarcely a week goes by that "Selfridges" reluctant, does not turn a fashionable culprit over to the police and for its own protection presses the charge. Generally the amateur shoplifters have pleaded guilty and urged kleptomaniacs in extenuation.

"I don't know why I did it."

"I never did such a thing in my life before."

"A sudden impulse."

CONSERVATION LIVE TOPIC IN DOMINION

Forestry Commission Meeting in Quebec Will Discuss Subject Extensively—Dakota Grain Men Advocate It.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Quebec, Jan. 17.—That Canada is alive to the necessity of taking immediate and well-directed steps to save the country's forests is evidenced by the large number of delegates, representing all the provinces and including many men of prominence in public affairs who arrived in the city today to attend the great Dominion Forestry Convention here this week. That the gathering is to be the largest and most representative of its kind ever held in the Dominion is already assured.

His Excellency the Governor-General has consented to make the opening address tomorrow. Senator W. C. Edwards, president of the Canadian Forestry Association, will preside, and among the speakers during the three day session will be Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Robert L. Borden, Hon. Frank Oliver, Hon. Sydney Fisher, Sir Lester B. Pearson, Hon. Frank Cochrane, R. H. Campbell, Dominion Superintendent of Forestry H. B. Graves, Chief Forester of the United States, and E. E. King, Forest Commissioner of the State of Maine.

Preceding the opening of the convention there was held today the annual meeting of the Commission of Conservation, at which the chairman, Hon. Clifford Sifton, outlined a plan regarding the conservation of forests, which will be discussed by the forestry convention. The chairman recommends an expenditure during the next few years aggregating $25,000,000 which he believes will make the forests of the Dominion practically immune from any great loss at one time by fire. The plan involves the organization of a firefighting and fire-preventive corps, modeled after the Northwest Mounted Police.

FEAR "BLACK DEATH" HAS FIRM FOOTHOLD

Physicians of England Are Becoming Alarmed at Increase of Pneumonic Plague.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]

London, Jan. 17.—England is becoming seriously alarmed over the accumulating evidence that pneumonic plague—the "black death"—has secured a firm foothold in the country.

It is not alone that the rats all over the island are unquestionably thoroughly infected—it is beginning to be clear now that many men, women and children have died of the disease, their illness having simply been wrongly diagnosed by the attending physicians. Expert investigators have practically proven that cases of supposed pneumonia as far back as 1906 were really plague and a correspondent of the London Times, for whose authority the newspaper voices, takes the dispassionate view that "we shall never succeed in eradicating England entirely of this plague which has found so hideous an entry."

"It seems probable" adds the London Express in a discussion of the same subject, "that the extermination of rats is in itself a hopeless task, and no more than a slight palliative."

While it is true that the number of cases of the disease among human beings is not yet very large, medical authorities are agreed that they are increasing steadily. The fact that the complaint in England tends to take not the bubonic but the pneumonic form, in which the inclination of infected breath even at a considerable distance is sufficient to transmit the contagion, is not a reassuring feature of the situation.

"This is an extremely serious affair," says the Express, "and we must grapple with it not in any spirit of panic, but with the fixed determination to leaving nothing which can possibly prevent a real disaster."

CRIME IS DISEASE

Should Be Treated Same as Epilepsy, Neurasthenia or Any Other Illness, and Doctor Points Out His Theories.

Charlestown, Mass.—Contending that thousands of the acts for which men are sentenced to prison are not crimes, and protesting that crime is always a deed committed by an individual when in a diseased state, Dr. Joseph I. McLaughlin, physician to the state prison at Charlestown, who has had as much experience with criminals as any physician in Boston, declares that the disease called crime is destined to be treated like epilepsy or neurasthenia, or any other disease, and the doctor goes on to bear out his theories by reference to a surprising catalogue of cases with which he has come in contact.

This record includes not only crimes which sent men to the chair or to protracted imprisonment in the state prison, but also those which have been committed within the prison walls, misdeeds which would seem impossible could take place under the very eyes of watchful wardens.

Crimes ranging from the darkest felony to the most untoward depravity are cited in his list. Dr. McLaughlin presents for one example, the production of counterfeit money by convicts who use the jail as their workshop, and who utilize the equipment of the prison for the carrying on of their handiwork. He says:

"Both of these acts may be classed as crimes, except that in the second instance was somewhat unbalanced, and on this account could not be blamed for the deed, even in accordance with the accepted treatment of criminals. He had since been sent back to the insane asylum, from which he came."

"But it is unfair to generalize about the misdeeds which take place in the state prisons, and to call them all crimes. The individual's point of view must be considered."

"In the accepted sense a crime, after all, is nothing but that which the law happens to call wrong. But in a large number of cases the criminal does not know, or does not realize, that he is a criminal. It is, therefore, quite to be expected that a man who has spent his whole life in one occupation, which is known as criminal to the world at large, such as counterfeiting or burglary, should turn naturally to that occupation when he has been in jail."

"It is not fair to say that a man is a 'hardened criminal' because he does the things in prison which he was accustomed to do when he was free. It is natural for him to turn to his occupation when he has lost his freedom. The present system of occupying the attention of the prisoners with some elevating pursuit of study or recreation has done much to improve this condition, and many men have begun doing untold good by serving a term in prison."

"It is no longer radical to hold that crime is a disease. It has been established that drunkenness is a disease. This was until a short time ago accounted a crime. 'I do not reason why the 'drunkards' of a man who is a victim of alcohol should be palliated any more than those of a man who has done some act under the stress of an analogous disorder.'"

"As for the treatment of crime as a disease, so much depends upon the personal equation of the individual in question that it is hard to generalize about it. In treating a case of crime, it is essential to take into consideration the stress under which the person committed the act for which he is being judged, and the conditions of life which he has been living under and the motives which prompted him. Many other factors will also enter the diagnosis, if we may call it that, varying with every case. The element of home training is one of the most important."

Dr. McLaughlin says it is a curious fact that among the prisoners at the state prison he has found a very small percentage of cases of illness, convicts being, as a rule, a remarkably healthy set of men.

DO WE AIM TOO HIGH?

The question of bettering conditions in civic life is over a debatable question but many good people fail to agree as to methods. Some argue that the saloon is the one and only great evil, and with the saloon eradicated all would be serene and peaceful. Others believe that the saloon will long continue to be a necessary evil because a large majority of the voters demand it, and so favor more stringent regulation.

In the meantime the moral sense of the community does not advance to higher ground and conditions for along, year after year, with no perceptible change. The only reason why we don't have seventy-five saloons instead of fifty-five is because, of the limit of population, and the only reason why we have fifty-five instead of fifteen is because public sentiment favors the larger number. The town is as good as we, the people, elect to have it. This is simply a plain statement of cold facts, apparent to every observer.

It is just possible that we aim too high, and thus fall in results. There are some things in the way of reform which are so practical that they ought to appeal to every sensible mind; things which neither interfere with the saloon or the landlord, but which vitally affect the homes of the city and the destiny of the next generation.

There are times when it becomes the duty of a city to aid the home in sheltering its young people from temptation and danger, and anyone who walks the streets of Janesville, late in the evening, will be forced to admit that many homes need aid in this direction at the present time.

The groups of boys, gathered at the street corners, cultivating habits which will curse them for a lifetime, and the girls, wandering aimlessly about inviting a flirtation at every opportunity, are sights which should cause every good citizen to stop and think and then ask himself: "What is my responsibility in the matter?"

worthy of the name, where the boy and girl is not better off at nine o'clock at night than on the street. The little city of Edgerton has a "Curfew bell," and every night at eight o'clock the boys and girls go scurrying home. This might be too early an hour for Janesville but this sort of an ordinance would be wholesome and might be easily secured with proper enforcement. If the suggestion is worth a trial, why not develop it?

THE DIFFERENCE.

When the Japanese-Russian war was on, the make-up of the two armies attracted much attention. The Russian soldier was a unit in an army of sorts, inspired by neither patriotism nor loyalty, but fighting thousands of miles from home, simply because he was compelled to.

The Japanese soldier was an individual fighting machine, fired with zeal and considering it an honor to die for the cause in which he was enlisted. The prize for which he was contending was more territory, and this the nation was compelled to have to maintain existence.

With 40,000,000 people trying to exist on a domain not much larger in area than Wisconsin, the acquisition of Manchuria was a necessity, and they fought with desperation. Victory was the natural outcome.

Because of this victory, which brought Japan to the surface as a fighting nation, Jingo writers in this country take occasion every now and then to issue a note of warning. The latest is based on the fact that Japan recently placed an order with China for 100,000 tons of rice, and therefore must be preparing for war with the United States. Rather a broad conclusion for one jump.

There is one fact, however, which should not be overlooked, and that is that expansion in these overcrowded countries is a necessity. This fact is well stated by a writer in Scribner's Magazine, who says:

"No man who lives in England and America can escape the vital necessity of Germany and Japan to expand or to go to the wall. 'The trouble has been and is, that we are looking at the question as one of malice, of diplomacy, of choice. It is nothing of the kind. There is no blame, no right or wrong, in the matter. It is life or death. For Great Britain and the United States, two nations already enormously rich, it is simply a question of more wealth. For Germany, for all Europe indeed, and for Japan, it is a matter of life and death.'

"The phrase 'Yellow peril,' German peril, 'Japanese peril,' is unfortunate, for the word 'peril' implies something terrible and imminent. The situation exists, but, as I hope to show later, neither the 'Yellow peril' nor the 'Japanese peril' is imminent, nor of threatening danger to us in America. I use the phrase because it is a familiar one, but I disassociate myself from any advocacy of narrow and self-conscious talk or action."

"To talk of friendly Japan, or of friendly Germany, however, is childish. No commercial rival armed to the teeth is friendly. What childish nonsense to call this crying 'Wolf!' It is an insult to that great power not to admit that it is a very fine, full-grown wolf—and just now very much on the prowl. That is the fundamental factor to be remembered in any discussion of this much discussed question. It is not to be wondered at that the nations whose lives are at stake consider the matter more seriously than nations which have only pounds or dollars at stake."

THE LAW'S DELAY.

When President Taft recommended that something be done to stir up activity in American courts, in the interests of a long suffering people, he was influenced by knowledge based on experience.

The law's delay has long been proverbial, and in certain classes of cases, nothing short of death clears the docket. This is especially true of patent right cases and is well illustrated in what is known as the "Selden" case, which has been in court since 1903, and is no nearer settlement today than it was then.

A large percentage of gasoline motor cars are operated under what is known as the Selden patents. The validity of these patents has long been a contention, Judge Hough of the United States circuit court deciding some years ago that they were valid, while Judge Joyce of the court of appeals, recently reversed the decision, and the case will finally land in the supreme court.

In the meantime the life of the patent is likely to expire before the higher or tribunal hands down a decision, and thus years of time and thousands of dollars are wasted in useless litigation. There are other cases equally aggravating.

While people are going west and south to buy land and improve their fortunes, it is gratifying to know that old Rock county is not destitute of opportunities. A gentleman was in the office yesterday who has made $8,000 on a rented farm during the last five years, when he started with nothing but a span of horses and a couple of cows. Today he owns a good farm near the city. There are many fields of diamonds overlooked, because of their nearness to our own dooryards.

There are two industries in this country which are obliged to run 365 days in the year regardless of expense or profit. They are the newspaper and the railroad. The average manufacturer may shut down his plant, during seasons of depression, but the paper which fails to go to press from any cause, or the railroad which suspends its trains for a day, would not be pardoned for a second offense.

The public demands service of these corporations, a fact which is not always considered in dealing especially with the railroads.

The Rev. Daniel Woodward of Omro will be rewarded for political work by a place on the State Board of Control. Mr. Woodward is the Methodist preacher who was criticized for opposing county option, and was forced to resign from his church. His people were loyal to him and more than half the membership resigned and established an independent church, making Mr. Woodward the pastor. He expects to serve the state during the week, and the church on Sunday.

The state of Iowa is likely to have a deadlock in the legislature, and may not be able to elect a United States senator. "Lafe" Young, the present incumbent, has 40 votes, the democratic candidate 52, while the balance of power is in the hands of the insurgents, represented by half a dozen candidates. Young is the man who should be elected, but the chances seem to be against him.

The "tax ferrets" are having a hard time to gain a foothold in Wisconsin. The Milwaukee mayor refused to sign a contract made by the council, and now the legality of the scheme is to be tested in the courts. Janesville evidently made no mistake in letting the proposition alone.

While New York democracy controls the state, the party is badly demoralized, and the nomination of Sheehan to succeed Depew in the senate may result in a split. Governor Dix will have his hands full in handling the Albany agitation.

The mild winter is causing a commotion in the butter and egg market. Many tons of these products are being released from cold storage and prices are badly demoralized.

Milwaukee golfers are keeping in trim by indoor practice and good scores are recorded.

Heart to Heart Talks.

THE BAD BOY.

A teacher in one of the schools of a big city made great effort to keep in order a boy eleven years of age, son of a wealthy society woman.

She sent him home after a series of misdeeds, instructing him to tell his mother why he had been dismissed. The next day the lad, was asked if he had told his mother.

"No," he replied.

"Why?" he was sharply asked.

"Well, teacher," he replied, "I haven't seen my mother for two weeks, and then she was just going out. When I start to school in the morning she is asleep, and they won't let me wake her. When I go home in the evening she goes out to dinner, and when she comes home I'm asleep, so I don't often see her."

In the school this boy is known as "the bad boy."

But who is really bad—this boy or his mother? It may seem cruel to say it, but—

The woman is a criminal!

In the sight of God she is guilty of breaking down the sacred traditions of the home, of exposing her own flesh and blood, of allowing the soul of her boy to be twisted by failing to put around him the moral atmosphere of a mother's influence.

Driven by some mad passion for pleasure or by some insatiable spirit of restlessness, she is forever on the wing, leaving her boy to his own devices.

Is it not tragic—and pathetic?

The boy is at an age when the body is the most restless. Every muscle calls for an impulse of activity. Is it strange that he should blunder into evil ways?

The boy cannot be blamed. Put under proper surroundings he might be different. Send this boy to the country, give him a chance to work or his surplus vitality, give him wholesome interests and kindly care and he would grow into a good man.

But now he bids fair to grow into a rich hoodlum, a creature without mental or physical stamina; a ruined boy, the wages of whose sin is likely to be early disgrace or early death.

Some day a dart shall pierce the soul of this boy's mother for having thus brought a man-child into the world and abandoned him.

POULTRY

CULLING THE LAYING FLOCK

Poultrymen, as Rule, Keep Too Many Fowls for Their Accommodations—Sell Drones.

Have you sold or otherwise removed, all the superfluous males from the poultry flock? If not, this should be done as soon as possible. Then next in order is the weeding out of all undesirable hens.

Someone will say: "Why, if I do that I will not have as many layers left as I should keep." To this I say, weed them out notwithstanding, and then if you find your flock too small, go out and buy, even though you have to pay more per pound or per head than you sold for, writes W. J. Cooper in Michigan Farmer. "I know that it is sometimes hard to locate people who will sell their pullets, or even desirable yearlings or two-year-olds, but if you will get out and hustle you can find them; as there is always someone making a change of some kind and letting the pullets go. I know of no way in which a little time can be more profitably spent than in picking up desirable bunches of young hens."

There are different ways of going about this. Your butcher buys chickens. Find out when he has a bunch of pullets coming in and be there when they arrive. If they suit you, the price will always buy them.

There are always a few sales being made by people who are making changes or are moving away. Be "Johnny on the spot" at these and you can usually find a few nice fowls at least. But if you cannot locate them in any other way just make it known locally that you are in the market for good laying stock and by offering a premium or a cent or more on the pound you can nearly always find someone willing to sell some.

In any event do not keep old or scrubby stock. You don't want the hen that is always found on the top roost during working hours. She is the easiest to catch of all and the easiest to replace as her value is merely that of a drone. What you want is workers, and workers that are not singing at their work. Did you ever watch the hen with the "song"? You will almost always find she has a good egg record. Show me a flock of hens with a ginsome cackle, and I will show you a flock of hens that is in the egg business every day of the week. When I approach a silent poultry yard during working hours I naturally feel that there is something wrong there—either sickness or worthlessness from age or other causes.

A hen that has the proper instincts, wants to be doing something every working minute. That she is not particular whether it be in your favorite pansy bed or not is "another story." The scrappy-legged hen is usually found on the roosts. However, she is sometimes a good layer, but as a rule she is a losing proposition and usually one of the first affected by disease. Her condition is usually a symptom of a poor constitution. Anyhow, it is safer to get rid of her.

Poultrymen, as a rule, keep too many fowls for their accommodations. So in weeding out the old ones and the drones you had better err on the side of retaining too few rather than too many. You may have accommodations for 1,000; if so, don't try to keep 1,500; or if your capacity may be 80 or 100; then don't keep 125 or 200. At any rate, only keep the number and kind of fowls that pay you a profit.

The Silver-Laced Wyandotte is the original of the Wyandotte family, and enjoyed a considerable boom back in the 80's. Because of the difficulty of breeding them with good markings it has been eclipsed in popularity by the Whites, but it has not been surpassed by any of the new breeds or varieties in utility qualities.

Charcoal for Poultry.

Charcoal is one of the most essential articles in the ration on the successful poultry farm, for it is a valuable corrector of bowel and stomach disorders. A good way is to buy charcoal already prepared, though a good substitute may be made by placing ears of corn on cob in the oven until charred and then shell them off and feed to the chickens.

Cure for Roup.

Roup may be apparently cured by systematic treatment, but it can never be entirely eradicated from the system. It is always apt to break out again, or to be transmitted to the young. Under no circumstances is it wise to use fowls in the breeding pen that have ever suffered from contagion in any form.

Uncle Walt

THE POET PHILOSOPHER
(Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams.)
By WALT MASON.

Last night worn out by hours of toll down in the busy mart's turmoil, I sat me in the fireless glow, and read some tales by Ed. Poe's Tales. I had not read those anecdotes since I was young and full of oats, but in my memory they stood as something grandly weirdly good. So now I took the book and read of buried men who were not dead; of one-eyed cats and toll-tale hearts; of mouthy bones and poisoned fountains; of talkers about their divers homes; of skulls and worms and catacombs; of gloomy dungeons, underground, of tuns of wine, wherein men drowned; of condors' wings and owls and bats, and tube of blood and rink-tailed rats. I threw that ilk book away. One fool more has feet of clay! Or is it that my taste is punk, since I have soured on Edgar's junk? Is all that rot concerning bats, and ghosts and ghoulia and so-called cats the kind of stuff that wins the heart of one who has regard for Art? I do not care for Art myself; I take some volume from the shelf—some book that has a joyous strain, whose author was not quite insane—and in its cheerful pages find refreshment for the heart and mind.

RAILROADS AS CIVILIZERS

American Traveler Declares Improved Transportation Will Stop Outbreaks in China.

A well-known American traveler returned the other day from Chungking, China, the scene of the most recent rioting. Chungking has no railroad connection, but is a city of the old style and dependent upon the archaic methods of transportation—the river, the junk, the cart, and the Chinese wheel. "Build a railroad into the province where there are anti-foreign outbreaks," said the traveler, "and there will be no more trouble. The natives will become too busy to harbor hatred against the race that is making them prosperous. Recently I went into the immense silk and cotton factories at Wuchang. The 600 looms of these establishments are operated by children, some of them less than twelve years old, some barely able to reach their machines, but who operate skillfully these foreign contrivances and receive for their labor fifteen cash (1 1/4 cents) a day. At Hangyang I saw the steel and iron plants, great mills covering one and a half square miles in area, with five blast furnaces and employing 20,000 Chinese, the establishment being conducted under the superintendence of Chinese civil engineers. When I congratulated the director of the works, Mr. Yen, a graduate of an American university, he said: 'We have just sent a shipment of pigiron to San Francisco and sold it at a profit. We will soon be in a position to supply your country and the rest of the world with steel rails, but just at present all we can make are needed at home.'"

ANNUAL HARVEST OF ICE HAS COMMENCED

Houses Above Railroad Bridge Are Being Filled by 125 Men—Harvest is Good.

The harvest of the City Ice company started yesterday morning and 25 men under the direction of Sam Tall are busily engaged in starting the product in the two buildings above the railroad bridge. The crop promise to be a very good one, the average thickness of the ice being twelve inches. The first tier of both houses were completely filled this morning and by tonight enough ice will have been stored away to fill them up to the second runway. It is estimated that it will take about two weeks to finish the harvest. Help is plentiful and the work is being pushed as fast as possible. In view of the present snowfall the work may be retarded somewhat but two weeks will be required to fill the job.

The process of this winter harvest is very interesting. After the ice is marked and sawed the blocks are run through a channel in the ice to the foot of the carrier in front of the ice house. Here they are placed on the overhead chutes, the power for which is furnished by a donkey engine. The ice is then sent up the chute to the different tiers or runways and shot into the houses where it is packed away in layers, being covered over with a layer of marsh hay.

Mr. Tall expects to store away about 18,000 tons within the next two weeks. With 125 men at work now, he will get additional help next week.

PLAN FOR REGULAR MATINEES ON ICE

Owners of Fast Horses Propose To Have Races At Gas House On Tuesdays, Fridays and Sundays.

Some good sport on the ice at the gas house pond is looked forward to in the next few weeks by the lovers of horse racing. The owners have had their animals out to try them and the ice is in fine condition for speed. It is now planned to hold regular matinees on the ice on Tuesday and Friday afternoons during the rest of the winter and each Sunday, commencing at two o'clock, when the weather permits. On Sunday some of the fastest horses in the city were brought out by their owners and several interesting contests took place. "The Rex," owned by E. May Lloyd, captured all the honors of the day, but the competition was keen. There were five participants, E. J. Schuchman, E. May Lloyd, "Nash," J. C. Peterson, J. C. Nichols, Thomas Nelson, John Short, and Edward Arnold, and John Huggan in being among the owners out.

TWO PAINFUL INJURIES AS RESULT OF ONE ACCIDENT

William Kuhlow, Sr., and Son George Both Hurt by Ladder Slipping.

While putting up a new sign in front of the McDonald restaurant last week, William Kuhlow, Sr., and George Kuhlow, his son, were both injured when the ladder on which they were standing slipped and fell. The young man dropped about sixteen feet and broke one of the bones in his left arm, just above the wrist. The older man, who was standing on a lower rung of the ladder, sprained his left wrist. It was at first thought that the injuries of both men were similar and that George Kuhlow had sprained his wrist, but after he had endured considerable pain from the injury, the arm was examined by a doctor and placed in splints. The injuries to the older man are quite painful and it will be about six weeks before the young man will be able to use his arm.

OLD BIBLE PARABLE HAS BEEN REVERSED

"The Prodigal Father" Was the Modern Version Related in Municipal Court Today.

The tale of the "Prodigal Father," almost the reverse of the well known Bible story, was related in municipal court this morning when John Metzinger was brought up, charged with drunkenness. Metzinger, son of Arthur G. Metzinger, appeared in the role taken by the father in the Biblical version of the story. He stated to the judge that since he had brought his father from the northern part of the state, the older man had been drinking quite heavily and the parent's behavior had so disgusted other members of the family that they would have nothing to do with the man. Metzinger, Jr., asked the judge to impose a sentence on the prisoner so the man would have a chance to sober up. The son also offered to furnish a home and provide for the father if the latter would give up drinking. The older Metzinger hesitated when the complaint was read, admitting he had been drinking, but said he was not disorderly. He finally pleaded guilty and was sentenced to spend five days in the county jail and pay a fine of $2 and costs or five days additional.

JANESVILLE WINS BY VERY UNEVEN SCORE

Local Bridge Enthusiasts Defeated Beloit By A Total Of 3544 Points Last Evening.

Although the guests of the Beloit lodge of Elks, the twenty two Janesville bridge whist players who journeyed to the Lino City last evening defeated their hosts in a most uneven tournament, their total score being 3544 points to the Beloit players 490, a clean margin of 3054 points. It was a most crushing defeat for the Janesville players winning at six of the eleven tables played, by wonderfully large margins and where they lost, mauling their opponents down to a meager gain. Previous to the games which were played at the Elks club rooms, the Janesville visitors were the guests of the Beloit gentlemen at a dinner at the Hotel Hilton. The teams paired and played as follows being the names of the Janesville players below first.

Richardson and Macfee lost to Parker and McIndoo, 60; Holmes and Hankins lost to J. J. Reitter and Van Wart by 392; Capelle and Valentine lost to Eldred and Thompson by 32; Welch and Stern lost to Murray and Lyons by 4; Van Kirk and Levy lost to Osborn and Weirick by 6.

Francis and Kemmerer won from Casey and Worthington by 319; Modgett and King won from J. L. Hendley and Fifield 234; Santman and Rehberg won from Kollogg and Gilman 194; Simpson and McCoy won from Hollahan and Lipman, 774; Harris and Carle won from Yates and Randall, 128; and Clark and Burnham won from M. Reitter and T. C. Hendley by 304. Janesville's total score being 3544.

All who were present had a most delightful evening and it is probable that a return tournament will be played shortly with the Janesville men as hosts to the Beloit brothers. The Janesville team was a combination of the famous regular and the same was true of the Beloit players.

The largest score made by the local players were those secured by the so called insurgents of the Janesville team and this feature of the tournament has created considerable amusement for the members of that faction.

There was a general movement and a dozen or more stepped into the complaint room. There were Inspectors Spencer and Ryker, of the Pennsylvania railroad, who told the assistant district attorney that the boy had gotten a suit case from them worth $35 and had secured $75 from their agent in Chicago on a worthless check. There was Martin McLean, of Brownling, King & Co., who said Shott had bought the evening clothes he was wearing at their store last Saturday night, for $39, and given a check. Representatives from the Martintine hotel and the New York Central lines were there with accounts of the youth and all of these things happened since Saturday. A complaint from the Pennsylvania railroad was taken and $2,000 bail set on a grand larceny charge. The others may bring their troubles to the higher court in case the prisoner is held for trial.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

WHEN a certain kind of white grapes were served at our breakfast table the other day and some one refused them, another member of the family looked at him in astonishment.

"Why don't you eat them?" he queried. "Why, those are the best kind of grapes there are."

Do you know, I think that remark was typical of a wrong attitude very many of us hold toward other things besides grapes.

What he meant was "I CONSIDER those grapes the best grapes there are," or

"Those are the grapes I LIKE the best."

The mistaken attitude toward life is this—we forget to realize how very much personal equation there is in our judgments and definitions.

We attempt to make our standards the standards of every one.

We try to foist our "best" and "worst" upon other people as their "best" and "worst," and can't understand it when they refuse to accept our point of view.

A learned English judge recently promulgated his idea of the fourteen commonest mistakes in life. Three of them—I believe I have quoted these before, but I think they are worth innumerable quotations—were:

"To try to measure the enjoyment of others by our own."

"To expect uniformity of opinion in this world."

"To endeavor to mold the opinions of everybody alike."

Evidently he had met many people who, left out the "I consider," there are people who say there is no such thing as absolute good and bad.

"Goodness" and "badness" they say, are fluctuating quantities depending entirely upon environment, bringing up, habit, point of view, etc. What is bad in one person may be good in another person and what is good in one may be merely neutral in another.

I can't quite see it as strongly as that. It seems to me that there are some few things which are always bad and some which are always good. Selfishness and its manifestations, for instance, are always bad.

But I do think that in all definition, in all judgment there is a tremendous personal equation, and that those who attempt to speak or think without reckoning with it are making one of the most foolish of all the fourteen—judging the judge's pardon, seems to me fourteen hundred times fourteen would be nearer the reckoning—common mistakes in life.

When you have learned to say and think and feel "I consider these the best grapes," instead of "These are the best grapes," then you have learned one of the big lessons of life.

NEW HOME OF EX-KING MANUEL. Abercrombie, Kaid McLean's House in King's Road, Richmond, Queen Amelia.

The report is in circulation that the ex-king of Portugal has leased Kaid, Mr. Harry McLean's house in King's Road, Richmond, though it is not yet said when the young king will move into the residence, which will be left furnished. The house stands in about four acres of ground. It is understood to have been selected by Queen Amelia, who personally inspected it.

THE NEGATIVE PERSON. There are two types of men who always claim attention—the one who adds to the material and the one who detracts from them. Between these two is the negative person—he who never counts in any summing up.

A person may live on a plane of morality that commands itself to the

God-fearing and highly respectable element of society but beyond the example of patient contentment with his lot never does any real good in the world.

The first type of man is constructive. Whatever he attempts to do he has in mind the single purpose of bringing the greatest good to the greatest number of people. He is not good because it pays to be good nor does he seek others to be good for the same reason nor because it is in accordance with the highest customs of society, but because it is the right thing to do.

There is no half-heartedness in his attitude. He goes about his life duties as if he had a distinctive and definite work to perform—a work which no one else could do. He makes no compromises with wrong to gain his end, the fight for the right with all the favor of a crusader and all the patient industry of a student.

This is the type of man who stands solid on the moral law when he is beset by forces as offending against it. Such a man fears neither the favor of friends nor the machinations of foes. If he is a preacher and finds fraud or corruption working in his community, even though his most influential power owners are involved, he will not be deterred from doing the thing he knows to be right.

His attitude may cause a split in the church because the blows he aims at the evil may hit his richest pew owner who may refuse to listen to his sermons and who may demand his withdrawal from his pulpit. Things may go so far that vote of his church is demanded. He is vindicated. Then he resigns. He has stood his ground. He is justified. The church is justified. Men are thereby taught a greater respect for the cloth because one worshiper has shown that he is possessed of the courageous manhood which should be a part of the equipment of every man who seeks to lead other men in the way of light.

After that experience he has no need to fear any man. He has proven his courage, and his influence has now increased and he becomes a potentiality of the first importance in the world.

The neutral man who never stands up and fights on either side of any cause is colorless. He is simply a man, likable and intelligent, of course, but of no real importance or force in the community—just a man who has lost his God-given right of influencing others and of helping the world in its progress towards greater things. Just progress towards greater things. Just progress towards greater things. Just progress towards greater things.

A man who only exists without ever experiencing any of the divine impulses that move men to contribute some little to the general welfare.

Winter Hints. In winter when a few warm, comforting gifts would be so useful for those who have little, it is a good time for the housewife to look over her wardrobe and storeroom and give to people who need and will appreciate, the clothing, bedding and furniture no longer in use. How much better to dispose of the accumulations of each year than to store them away for moth and rust to corrupt.

There is so much in the ordinary home that is worse than useless because it is doing nobody any good and making care and work to look over and keep. There are many homes that would be cheered by a gift that would really be a comfort to be rid of.

The days of much bric-a-brac are passed. We are disposing of much each year; it is often a hard thing to do, yet how much more comfort can be taken in a home that is not filled with things. There are thousands of homes with attics overflowing with things that might be the means of keeping many poor children from suffering this cold weather.

Winter Dishes. Try cooking salsify after thoroughly washing the roots without scraping, just as beets are cooked, then scrape the skin off, and it is removed easily without any discoloring of the bands.

Cut the tender-cooked salsify in slices, dip in egg and crumbs, then in egg again and crumbs and saute in butter. These taste much like oysters.

During the cold weather the fat meats and pork are better digested and keep up the body heat.

When serving a roast of pork or chops or sausages, garnish them with nice fried apples. Core the apple and cut it in slices without peeling; put a little butter into a spider and fry the apples in this, adding a bit of sugar. Turn the apples carefully so that the shape is not spoiled, and serve overlapping each piece. Place around the platter surrounding the meat.

This not only makes a pretty garnish, but one that is highly satisfactory to eat.

Nellie Maxwell.

An Eye-Opener. A child of strict parents, whose greatest joy had been the weekly prayer meeting, was taken by its nurse, to the circus for the first time. When he came home he explained: "Oh, mamma, if you once went to the circus you'd never, never go to prayer meeting again in all your life."—Harper's Magazine.

Curious Animal. A curious animal is the alpaca, which has an appearance immediately between a llama and a sheep and yields from ten to fourteen pounds of beautiful wool. It crossed with the vicuña the wool is even finer, in color, like the llama, alpacas are black, white, gray and red.

VELVET AND SATIN COSTUME.

One-piece frocks of velvet or a combination of velvet and satin or velvet cloth are modish for wear under separate coats. A rich shade of deep purple satin and velvet a few tones darker were put together attractively on lines shown in our sketch. Small jet buttons were used profusely on sleeves and either side of front velvet panel. Chemise and stock are cream chiffon, the latter finished around bottom with a narrow band of pink fur. Similar bands form sleeve finish and the bonnet matches this fur.

WHITE AND GOLD EVENING GOWN.

Quite the handsomest gown worn at a recent evening function was of Irish lace and white satin. The four-draped of lace had an intricately draped overside of white chiffon, bordered all around with crystal fringe. The bodice of lace in bolero effect was outlined with gold embroidery.

A gown of this sort could be fashioned quite as effectively, and at much less expense if the foundation were of satin instead of lace. The model is exceedingly graceful.

THE NEGATIVE PERSON. There are two types of men who always claim attention—the one who adds to the material and the one who detracts from them. Between these two is the negative person—he who never counts in any summing up.

A person may live on a plane of morality that commands itself to the

God-fearing and highly respectable element of society but beyond the example of patient contentment with his lot never does any real good in the world.

The first type of man is constructive. Whatever he attempts to do he has in mind the single purpose of bringing the greatest good to the greatest number of people. He is not good because it pays to be good nor does he seek others to be good for the same reason nor because it is in accordance with the highest customs of society, but because it is the right thing to do.

There is no half-heartedness in his attitude. He goes about his life duties as if he had a distinctive and definite work to perform—a work which no one else could do. He makes no compromises with wrong to gain his end, the fight for the right with all the favor of a crusader and all the patient industry of a student.

This is the type of man who stands solid on the moral law when he is beset by forces as offending against it. Such a man fears neither the favor of friends nor the machinations of foes. If he is a preacher and finds fraud or corruption working in his community, even though his most influential power owners are involved, he will not be deterred from doing the thing he knows to be right.

His attitude may cause a split in the church because the blows he aims at the evil may hit his richest pew owner who may refuse to listen to his sermons and who may demand his withdrawal from his pulpit. Things may go so far that vote of his church is demanded. He is vindicated. Then he resigns. He has stood his ground. He is justified. The church is justified. Men are thereby taught a greater respect for the cloth because one worshiper has shown that he is possessed of the courageous manhood which should be a part of the equipment of every man who seeks to lead other men in the way of light.

After that experience he has no need to fear any man. He has proven his courage, and his influence has now increased and he becomes a potentiality of the first importance in the world.

The neutral man who never stands up and fights on either side of any cause is colorless. He is simply a man, likable and intelligent, of course, but of no real importance or force in the community—just a man who has lost his God-given right of influencing others and of helping the world in its progress towards greater things. Just progress towards greater things. Just progress towards greater things. Just progress towards greater things.

CLEANING DAY HINTS

USE A SOLUTION OF WASHING SODA ON TILED GRATES.

Wear Rubber Goggles When Putting Down a Carpet—Paper Will Stick Over Whitewash if Skim Milk Is Put in the Paste.

To clean tiled grates, a strong solution of washing soda thickened to make a paste with fuller's earth is excellent. This will badly remove stains or grime, while it is equally efficient in the case of grease-spotted marble. The paste should be left on for an hour or two, and then washed off with a flannel dipped in a hot lather.

In putting down a carpet it is an excellent plan to slide a pair of goggles over the shoes. The rubber enables the carpet to be drawn out and stretched by simply walking or pushing the carpet with the feet from the center to the corners.

In papering a room which has hitherto been whitewashed, it is not easy to make the paper adhere satisfactorily. The experiment should be tried of forming the paste with skim milk instead of water. The milk must, however, be carefully skimmed so that every drop of the cream has been removed, the whey of separated milk being the best for the purpose. The paste must be scalded well, and should on no account be too thick.

The best method of cleaning a mirror, whether new or antique, is that of rubbing it in the first instance with a sponge saturated with methylated spirits, and then sprinkling the surface of the glass with powdered indigo. If this is left for a few moments and then dusted off with a clean leather, a good polish should be obtained.

Larded Liver.

Cut half a pound of fat salt pork into lardons and thrust them about half an inch apart into fresh calf's liver, so that they project on both sides. Put two tablespoons of butter into a saucepan with a small onion (minced), pepper and some sweet herbs, chopped, also a few spoonfuls of strained tomato juice. Cover closely and set in a frying pan of boiling water for one hour, keeping the outer pan full all the time and turning the liver twice. Then take out the saucepan and set over the fire, but cook slowly. When the liver is nicely browned below, turn it. At the end of 40 minutes boil up once sharply and for the first time. Take out the liver and keep hot. Add a little boiling water to the gravy, strain, thicken with browned flour and pour over the liver.

The Narrow Skirt.

It is said that a garment is never fashionable to a woman when it becomes too fashionable. From this argument, is predicted the downfall of the narrow skirt. It is even hinted that this is the psychological moment for the appearance again of the crinoline. But even if this disaster does not descend upon fashionable women it is argued that a reaction in favor of a more capacious skirt is inevitable. All these agitators forget the fact that woman is not always swayed by whims, and the comfort and hygiene of the moderately narrow skirt is too pronounced to be quickly discarded by even the most fickle.

Muslin Rocks.

One and one-half cups of brown sugar, one cup of butter, three eggs beaten separately, one teaspoon of soda dissolved in boiling water, two and three-fourths cups of flour, pinch of salt, one teaspoon of cinnamon, one-half teaspoon of cloves, one teaspoon of vanilla, one-third pound of nut meats (English walnuts), three-fourths pound of seeded raisins. Fill teaspoon and drop into buttered pan.

Eggless Croutons.

One cup of grated raw potato, one cup of sugar, one cup of milk, one teaspoon of cream of tartar, one-half teaspoon of soda, saltspoon of salt, grating of nutmeg and flour to roll. Mix in the order named, roll out in thin strips, twist and fry in hot lard. The dough will seem very short, but the potato swells in cooking, and they will not soak fat. Roll in sugar while hot.

DRINKING LEMON AND WATER

Morning Beverage Good for the Complexion—How to Keep the Cut-Fruit Fresh.

Lemon and water taken early each morning has become a common drink among women who value their complexions. Nothing keeps the digestion in better condition.

Since sugar is not used, there is no danger of acid even for gouty and rheumatic subjects.

Do not use too much lemon. The juice of a third or half the fruit is enough. To keep the cut lemon fresh for several days is something of a problem.

Cut off only the section to be used and squeeze the juice from the cut portion. The rest can be turned, cut side down, in a cup or it can be put in the same position on waxed paper. This should be big enough to fold over the lemon and keep out the air.

Treated in either of these ways, a lemon will keep several days even in hot weather. Do not stand in a warm closet nor where the fruit will freeze.

THINGS IT'S WELL TO KNOW

Dried Coffee Grounds Good to Fill Pin-cushions—Vinegar Removes the Odor of Paraffin.

Dried coffee grounds answer well for filling a pin cushion; they do not attract moths like wool nor mice as bran does.

Tinned fruits should be turned out of the tins two hours before using; the flavor of it is greatly improved by this treatment.

Vinegar will remove the disagreeable odor of paraffin from earthen and tin ware; dip a rag into the vinegar and scour the vessel with it.

Gas stoves require a good deal more cleaning than they often get. A dirty stove is the cause of a disagreeable smell in the house.

Use old curtains or newspapers to rub them over after cooking, then polish with grate polish; finish off with an old piece of velvet or fannel.

Again That Big "If."

INVESTIGATION WAS COMPLETED MONDAY

Assistant Fire Marshall S. S. Summers completes work on the A. L. Fisher fire.

State Fire Marshall T. M. Partell and his assistant S. S. Summers, have completed their investigation of the fire which destroyed the A. L. Fisher warehouse on Monday evening, January 9. Mr. Summers made a statement last evening before returning to Madison which completely clears away any rumor of incendiarism but failed to give his explanation of the mysterious manner in which the fire started.

Both Partell and Summers have spent several days in Janesville carefully going over all possible causes for the fire and also investigating all who might have any information as to the origin of the blaze which burned the structure to the ground and caused a heavy loss.

Mr. Summers stated that a most thorough investigation had failed to reveal any suspicion of incendiarism even after the most careful investigation possible. The books showed that the warehouse contained 445 cases of tobacco, two hundred of which had been sold that day. That Mr. Fisher had visited the factory between one and two on Monday, had left the door locked with the key in the lock outside, where it was found by the watchman at three when he returned and that the fire did not break out until between six and seven.

Mr. Summers declared it stated that Mr. Fisher had urged them to make a most exhaustive investigation and had aided them in every way possible, throwing all his books open to their inspection and otherwise furthering the probing of the fire which has cost him several thousand dollars.

The story deals with the conquest of the Northwest by the United States troops. Living in that section is John Ermine, a young white man who was raised from infancy by a friendly Indian tribe, and whose only education had been received from a white recluse known to the Indians as Crook's Bear. Ermine is induced to join the scouts of the United States Army, his decision to go out into the world being influenced by his hope of finding the original of a "sun picture," or photograph, which he had found while roaming through the wilds.

Ermine reports to the United States troops just in time to save a wagon train from destruction by stealing through the lines of attacking Sioux and bringing a rescuing troop of cavalry to the scene. He then meets the original of the "sun picture"—Katherine, the daughter of Mad. Seacles, the commandant of the post to which he voluntarily has assigned himself. He declares his love for the girl, but she tells him that marriage with him is impossible at least, she thinks it is at that time, but the subsequent events bring to her a change of heart.

The drama "The Call of the Wild" is founded upon the stirring book by Frederic Remondet, "John Ermine of the Yellowstone," than whom no more vivid writer upon topics pertaining to western life ever put pen to paper. All of the characters are clearly and forcibly drawn, the atmosphere of the early military post stands out in bold relief and the combination of virile and complete is one which is equalled very seldom.

POULTRY EXHIBIT AND CORN SHOW AT MILTON

Fourth Annual Show by Local Association Will Take Place January 31 to February 3.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Milton, Jan. 17.—The fourth annual exhibit of the Milton Poultry association will be held at the village hall of this place, January 31 to February 3. The officials are endeavoring to make this a banner year and there is no doubt but what the show will be a success. E. G. Roberts of Fort Atkinson is to be the judge. Mr. Roberts is well known among poultry fanciers as a man well versed in his line and one of sound judgment and a believer in the "square deal."

A novel feature of the annual shows here is the corn department. Prominence is offered for the best exhibits of all varieties of 1910 corn. An expert from the Wisconsin College of Agriculture will act as judge in this department, and will also deliver a lecture at 1:30 in the afternoon of the first day on which day the prizes for corn will be awarded.

EVANSVILLE IS AFTER NEW TRAINING SCHOOL

Sent Head Of Seminary In That City To See County Superintendent Yesterday.

That Evansville is making a strenuous effort to get the county training school was evidenced by a visit of A. L. Whitcomb, the head of the Evansville seminary to this city yesterday, during which he called upon County Supt. Antkowiak and talked concerning the matter. Mr. Whitcomb, while wholly uninformed as to the requirements of such a school, was desirous of obtaining information of the county superintendent. It was his desire to put before Mr. Antkowiak the proposition of incorporating the training school within the seminary, this seeming like a good inducement to offer. The Evansville institution has a building and a corps of teachers already on hand and it was thought that this would greatly facilitate the establishment of the training school as these were the chief requirements of the new project.

Mr. Antkowiak went over the required course of study with him and it seems that the amount of work necessary was far beyond the expectations of Mr. Whitcomb. The latter returned to Evansville to lay the matter before the board of the seminary for further consideration.

Assistant State Supt. of Education J. B. Borden of Madison, called upon the county superintendent yesterday morning in connection with the county training school, its location and requirements.

FORMER JANESVILLE MAN IS PROMOTED

H. N. Kennedy is General Agent of Northern Pacific With Headquarters at Seattle.

H. N. Kennedy, who formerly made his home in this city and whose father-in-law, S. Kent resides here, has been appointed general agent of the Northern Pacific with headquarters at Seattle, Washington. Six years ago, Mr. Kennedy was a traveling freight agent out of Tacoma and since that time his promotion has been rapid. He received his education in this city and attended the University of Washington. Mr. Kennedy began his railroad experience about 22 years ago on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha road in Nebraska. Later he went to work for the Northern Pacific as operator of Placer, Montana, where he remained until six years ago when he was made freight agent out of Tacoma. From this position he went to chief clerk in May, 1907, he was made general agent at Spokane. His promotion to the office at Seattle is significant as many of the higher officials of the road have gone out of this office. Mr. Kennedy is now looked upon as one of the rising railroad men of the west and his outlook for the future is very bright.

Mrs. Edith Smith Davis, Advocated Temperance Teaching in the Public Schools.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Monroe, Wis., Jan. 17.—Mrs. Edith Smith Davis, state and world superintendent of scientific temperance instruction in the public schools, delivered an excellent talk on temperance before the large audience which gathered at a mass meeting of the churches of the city with the local organization of the W. C. T. U. She gave interesting accounts of her travels abroad and in this country, touching upon the liquor question in connection with her account of her travels. In the north the speaker attempted to show by many concrete examples that the salvation of the many lies in the prohibition in all schools and gave a most interesting lecture before the grade teachers of the city, the senior class of the high school, Prof. G. H. Haverston's class in "Theory of Teaching" and the students of the county training school, who met in the high school to attend the lecture.

One Reason Why IN BUSINESS Big Things Are Big

Proclaiming himself an advocate of extensive newspaper advertising as the best medium to build up and maintain a big business concern, A. W. Greene, president of the National Biscuit Company, declared recently:

"It is one of my axioms that business can no more be carried on without advertising than it can without money. The man who has an article for sale must tell the public in an intimate way what it is good for, how it is better than similar articles, what is gained by using it, and what is lost by not using it. AND THIS MUST BE TOLD A THOUSAND TIMES."

She went straight across the store-room to the rear wall of the hut, the wall that backed squarely against the sheer surface of the cliff. Apparently to make sure that she had chosen the right point in the wall, then, letting go his hand, she stooped and picked up a stick of firewood which lay at her feet. With this she struck pretty hard upon the planking. The sound which the blow gave forth was as hollow as a drum.

Cayley started. "A cave!" he exclaimed. "A cave here!—Oh, I see, it's a cold cellar they made by cutting a hole in the ice that filled the fissure. And why do you suppose they boarded it up?"

The girl laughed delightedly. Evidently she had not, as yet, developed the whole of her discovery. She flashed on the light again.

"Look!" she commanded. In the center of a little circle of wall which the bull-eyes now illuminated Cayley saw the barrel of a rusty hinge.

"You see," she went on, "it's a door, and they only nailed it up the other day. There's a nail-head somewhere here that's quite bright. I caught the glint of it while I was rummaging before breakfast, and that was what made me look."

Simply Clung to Him.

Cayley darted back into the living room, returning almost instantly with the broken-handled pick.

In less than a minute, with a protesting squawk, the rude door swung open, and they saw before them just what Cayley had predicted. A rather high, but narrow cavity, the sides of which were the naked rock of the cliff, but the floor and ceiling solid ice.

Despite the fact that the girl's excitement over the discovery of the cave had, for a moment, carried Cayley along with it, he was not greatly surprised, and not at all cast down when, at the end of five minutes of hasty exploration, it was made evident to them that the ample supply of stores which they sought was not to be found here.

Jeanne herself would not, perhaps, have entertained so high a hope had she learned of the reference to the other cave which Cayley found in the journal before she herself had chanced upon the mouth of this one. As it was, the theory that the stores were to be found in a cave vaguely situated along the glacier, made little impression upon her, she was so sure that they had been right here, under their hands.

When their investigation made it clear that whether he was right or not, certainly she was wrong, she was bitterly disappointed. Cayley was aware of this, even as they stood here, side by side, with no light to see her face by. She said nothing, or very little, but he knew, nevertheless, that for just this moment all the life and courage had gone out of her; knew that the slight figure there, so close beside him, was drooping, trembling a little.

He laid a steady hand upon her shoulder. Almost instantly, under his touch, she turned to him, caught with both hands at the unbuttoned edges of the rough woolen jacket he wore, and, sobbing a little now and then, but otherwise in silence, simply clung to him.

He did not offer, with his arms, to draw her any closer, to turn what was a mere instinctive appeal to the protection of his strength and courage, into an embrace. He kept a hand on each of her shoulders, more by way of support than anything else, and waited a moment before he spoke.

"After all," he said at last, "what we've got here is just so much clear gain, and it will be immensely valuable to us, though it isn't what we expected. The fact that it is their superfluity, the things they hadn't any particular or immediate use for, doesn't make what we've found here any the less valuable to us. That pile of bear skins here will supply what is, at this moment, the most vital of our wants. That big sack appears to contain feathers; and those various tucks will serve any number of purposes—forks and spoons for one thing. As to that great lump of sperm-candle, it will keep us supplied with candles all through the winter. And, imagine why they didn't use it themselves, except on the theory that the longer they lived here, the more they grew like beasts; the more content with the beast's habit of life, and the more inert about taking the trouble to provide themselves with such of the comforts and decencies of life as they might have had. So you see, we may find among the things they had no use for the very ones that will help us most."

The cutting in the ice did not go very far back in the fissure, and they were soon at the end of it, and without having made any new discovery of importance, either. There was a little of cast-off articles of various sorts, chiefly clothing which future privations might make useful to them. There was a great frozen lump of brownish-green vegetation, which they afterward identified as the edible scurvy grass to which Captain Fielding had referred in his journal.

That was all, or they thought it was, but just as they were about to retrace their steps to the hut, Cayley happened to glance up. The roof of the cave was not very much higher than it had to be to permit him, to stand erect in it, something under seven feet; but here at the further end of it he saw a circular, chimney-like hole, about two feet in diameter, leading straight upward through the solid ice in the fissure.

CHAPTER XVI.

Footprints. Nature had nothing to do with the formation of it, so much was clear enough. It had been cut out by hand, and evidently with infinite labor. Flushing his bull-eyes over it did not enable him to see the end of it, but it did reveal a series of notches running straight up the two opposite surfaces. The only purpose they would serve would be to make possible the ascent of the chimney.

Jeanne followed his gaze, and then the two looked at each other, completely puzzled.

"Some one must have made it," she said; "and it must have been frightfully hard to make—a tunnel right up through the ice like that. But what in the world can they have made it for?"

"I've no idea," he confessed, "but it goes somewhere, and I mean to find out where."

"Don't follow it too far," she cautioned. "It would only lead one foot all off one of those key notches to bring about a dreadfully ugly fall."

"One couldn't fall far down a tube of that diameter, unless he had completely lost his nerve, for there's always a chance to catch one's self. And you're to remember that I'm used to falling. No, I'll be as safe up there as I would on a turnpike. Yes, really."

With that and a nod of reassurance, he scrambled up into the mouth of the long chimney. He had taken his bull-eyes with him, so the girl was left in the dark. She dropped down on the heap of bear skins to wait for him.

She had no means of measuring the time, and it seemed a perfectly interminable while before she heard Cayley returning down the ice chimney. Had she known how long it really was, she would have been justified in feeling seriously worried about him, but not knowing, she attributed the seeming duration of his delay to the tedium of sitting in the dark, with nothing to do. Even at that, she was conscious of a feeling of relief when she heard him call out to her once more, cheerfully, albeit somewhat hollowly, from the chimney's mouth:

"Jeanne, where are you?"

"Here! All the while! You must be half frozen. I've been gone the better part of an hour."

"I didn't know how long it was, and I kept thinking you'd be back any minute. . . . But where in the world have you been?"

By the time she asked that question they had groped their way back into the storeroom and thence into the living room of the hut, and by now she was looking at him in the full light of day.

He dropped down, with a rather explosive sigh, upon one of the bunks, and poked tentatively at his thighs and shoulders as if they were numb with fatigue.

"I think by a reasonable estimate."

He did not offer, with his arms, to draw her any closer, to turn what was a mere instinctive appeal to the protection of his strength and courage, into an embrace. He kept a hand on each of her shoulders, more by way of support than anything else, and waited a moment before he spoke.

"After all," he said at last, "what we've got here is just so much clear gain, and it will be immensely valuable to us, though it isn't what we expected. The fact that it is their superfluity, the things they hadn't any particular or immediate use for, doesn't make what we've found here any the less valuable to us. That pile of bear skins here will supply what is, at this moment, the most vital of our wants. That big sack appears to contain feathers; and those various tucks will serve any number of purposes—forks and spoons for one thing. As to that great lump of sperm-candle, it will keep us supplied with candles all through the winter. And, imagine why they didn't use it themselves, except on he said, "that chimney is five inches high. I kept going and going and going, till I began to believe that there wasn't any end to it; or that, by some magic or other, I slipped down a yard as often as I went up one. But I did get to the end at last; and I'll give you a thousand guesses as to what I found there."

"The observatory," she hazarded. "Oh! but not really? I did not mean that for an honest guess at all. It was just the first thing that came into my head. But how could they pull the pilot-house of the Phoenix up through that little hole in the ice?"

"Well, to tell the truth, I don't believe they did," he answered with mocking seriousness. "It's more likely that they took it to pieces, and then rigged a boom and tackle up at the cliff-head and hauled it up there they put it together again right across the fissure, and then tunneled down, or up, the whole depth of the cliff. It must have taken them weeks to do it, and when it was done they had an inside connection between it and the hut, so that they were quite independent of the weather. And it must have been a great place to make observations from."

"Have been?" she echoed questioningly. "Isn't it now?"

"No, because it's all snowed and frozen in. It's buried by this time, and dark, of course, as a pocket. But everything inside is quite undisturbed. I doubt if a single member of the Varus' crew ever saw it, or even suspected that such a place existed."

He unbuttoned his jacket and took from an inner pocket a scrap of paper.

"Being a medical person," he explained, "I made an inventory. It's really quite a respectable list."

She seated herself beside him on the bunk as if to read the paper.

"I imagine you will need an interpreter," he said. "I've half forgotten what these tracks mean myself. My hands were so stiff with the cold it wasn't very easy to write. But that first word is telescope. And then there are the meteorological instruments, barometers, thermometers, and so on, and the Phoenix's compass, sextant and chronometer, a microscope, a paraffin oven and a big chunk of paraffin, an oil lamp, a five-gallon can about half full of oil, and a small stove. There was a providential treasure for me in the form of a razor, which they used, I suppose, for cutting microscopic sections with. I'm glad they hadn't a microtome to do it properly."

"You didn't find a comb for me, did you?" she asked. "Because, unless you did, or until you do, you won't be allowed to use the razor."

"I suppose I could make you one, or a sort of one. It would be genuine ivory, anyway."

He had come, apparently, to the end of the list.

"Well," she said, "I suppose we might find something to do with almost any one of these things; some of them will be useful, certainly. And it's pleasant, somehow, to think of our little pilot house, all snowed in, up there on the cliff-head, and of our inside passage leading up to it."

"That's quite true," he said. "I suppose it's all romantic nonsense, but it does give one a certain feeling of security. . . . However, I went on, 'we're not reduced as yet to anything as intangible as that as a subject for giving thanks. You haven't even the whole of my list yet. I've saved the best till the last.'"

He turned the paper over in his hand as he spoke. She did not attempt to read what he had written, but sat there beside him, her eyes upon the bearded face which was peered across the other, and waited rather tensely for him to tell her.

The Small Package. We used to say, "Good things come in small packages;" nowadays everything does.

Try This Home-Made Cough Remedy. Costs Little, But Does the Work Quickly, or Money Refunded.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually ends a deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, chest pain, bronchitis and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative, which helps to get a cough. This remedy makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in galactol and all the natural pine elements which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This plan of making cough syrup with Pinex and Sugar Syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada, that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equalled.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

and Sciences.

THE COMPASS IN AVIATION.

In navigating the air one is lifted so high above all familiar objects and the entire landscape is so altered in appearance that it becomes a serious problem to maintain one's direction. The ordinary mariner's compass is serviceable only within limits, for even on shipboard it is found to be affected by the iron hull and other metal parts of the craft, and on an aerial trip it is necessarily placed so close to the engine, metal rods and electric equipment that its efficiency is very much impaired.

The writer has found in traveling on the cars that a hand compass will point with a fair degree of identity to the north. Yet the needle is often deflected, now by the extra rails of a second track in passing, now by the influence of cars standing on such a track, and to a pronounced extent by a near locomotive, and again, even violently, by the iron of a bridge over which the train is passing.

At other times it is disturbed by unaccountable influences, rising probably from magnetic conditions resident in the soil at certain points and suggesting the presence of mineral deposits.

Announcement has just been made of a new kind of compass, invented by W. Alexander George Marquie, formerly connected with the Hiram Maxim company. This is explained as an application of the laws of refraction of light to the problem of direction and is quite independent of magnetic forces, hence is immune to disturbances from adjacent metal construction.

This is said to be the first radical departure from the common compass used by mariners for 2,000 years. Night or day this compass, equipped with an arrangement of mirrors, may be easily read at a distance of twelve or fifteen feet.

ANATOMY OF WOMAN IS AWRY

Miss Moses, a Nurse, Has Every Internal Organ on Side Opposite to Usual Location.

Philadelphia.—The mixed anatomy of Alexander Jordan, whose heart, spleen, liver and stomach are reversed, according to the standard set in the construction, is paralleled in the case of Miss Anna A. Moses, a trained nurse of Oysterburg, Bedford county, Pa. Miss Moses not only possesses all of the transpositions boasted by Jordan, but was treated for appendicitis six years ago by applications on the left side of her abdomen.

She presents a complete case of "sinus inversus," every organ of her body being on the side opposite to where it is usually found. Even her lungs, from an inspection of the lobes by X-ray, were found to be inverted. Miss Moses writes with her right hand, but says in learning to do so in childhood, before her mixed anatomy was known, she seemed to be conquering a protesting tendency to left-handedness which would be the effect of an inherited right-handedness from both of her parents.

She discovered that her heart was on the right side, or rather the wrong side, while studying to be a trained nurse. In 1898, but did not suspect that the reversal was complete, and, as she suffered not even the slightest illness, was not examined by a physician until 1904.

Then she began to feel pains in the lower part of her abdomen on the left side, and visited Dr. Mervyn R. Taylor, at 1700 Race street. Miss Moses laughed gayly when the physician became perplexed in sounding her heart with his stethoscope. An examination convinced Dr. Taylor that all of her organs were reversed.

The Kidney Cure Without a Failure. The Positive Cure That Revolutionizes Treatment of Kidney Diseases, Rheumatism and Bladder Trouble.

These statements are not exaggerated. There is no necessity in doing so, because every man and woman suffering from kidney trouble, or rheumatism, or bladder trouble, or any other ailment, can prove it within 24 hours by getting a free package of Dr. Derby's Kidney Pills at any drug store.

DAILY DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN, Food Specialist.

UNCOOKED FOOD.

We eat a large part of our food uncooked, and it is best that we should. It has been found that animals are better nourished on uncooked than on cooked cereals. I have also found that one tends to eat uncooked food more slowly than cooked. An infant cannot live on boiled milk. Fresh uncooked food does not ferment and produce alcohol in the system so readily as cooked cereals. There is intoxication from excessive supply of cooked food, especially starch foods. Well masticated cereals and nuts are easily digested without cooking, when the system becomes adapted to the change, and there is always a decided gain in health and endurance from adopting such a diet, avoiding incompatible mixtures.

Just Superstition. Finding a pocket book means that the dreamer will finish his or her education abroad. Looking one reads the coming of a letter.

When You're Watched. When you drift along with the stream nobody pays any attention to you. When you buck against the tide everybody watches you.
